

TALKING TO YOUR HEALTHCARE PROVIDER ABOUT BY

Speaking up about issues down there can be hard—we've been there too! It's high time to face your fears and take charge of your vaginal health. If you think you might have bacterial vaginosis (BV), print this out and take it with you when you visit your healthcare provider.

BEFORE YOUR VISIT¹

Include all the symptoms you are experiencing, even if you don't think they are related:		Take any medications, vitamins, herbs, or supplements? Include how often and what dosage you take:		Make sure to: ☐ Avoid using tampons
	Unusual vaginal discharge Fishy smell Burning/itching Other				Not douche or use vaginal deodorant sprays Not have sex for 24 hours before your appointment
E	DURING YOUR VIS Here are some quest	SIT	healthcare provider	:
What causes BV?			Is BV an STI, and does my partner need to know?
Can I do anything to prevent BV?			Will my partner need to be tested or treated?
What signs and symptoms should I look for?			Is it safe to have sex if I have BV?
What treatment options are available?			When can I expect relief from my symptoms?
Are there special instructions for taking treatment?			What can I do if my symptoms return after treatment?
BV (can be a real bummer. But reme	ember, you're not	alone. In fact, over 21	millio	n women in the U.S. get

Visit keepherawesome.com for additional resources and information about BV.

BV annually.² Thankfully, BV is treatable with a prescription from your healthcare provider.

1. "Bacterial Vaginosis." Mayo Clinic. Mayo Foundation for Medication Education and Research. 29 July 2017. www.mayoclinic.org/diseases-conditions/bacterial-vaginosis/diagnosis-treatment/preparing-for-appointment/ptc-20198422. Accessed 25 Sept 2017. 2. Koumans EH, Sternberg M, Bruce C, et al. The prevalence of bacterial vaginosis in the United States, 2001-2004; associations with symptoms, sexual behaviors, and reproductive health. Sex Transm Dis. 2007;34(11):864-869.

